NEW YORK, 14: PHILADELPHIA, 9. PHILADELPHIA, April 23,-The New York won the last game of the series from Philadel phia as neatly and completely as they lost the three preceding ones. The men from Gotham at last stacked up against a pitcher that the could hit—Donohue, late of St. Louis—and during the time he occupied the box, a little short of two doubles and a triple, all of which landed seven runs. Thus it was that Joyce's men took the Phillies' nerve away and wore never headed in a duil, tedious, and uninteresting ame of all that dragged through nearly two doubles and that dragged through nearly two doubles are the locals make it four straight and went home downhearted.

Dohen pitched well for the New Yorks, although he was hit freely at times. After the damage had been done Dunkle, the youngster who threw the New Yorks down so hard the other day, was put in. Hehad taken no practice and for a time was as wild as a March hare. When he took hold of the ball two men had come home and two were on bases. His first official act was to make a wild pitch, and Joyce Jogged to the plate. Then Gleason hit's little one between the home plate and third base. Davis came flying home and boat out the threw of Dunkle to McFarland. After that Dunkle pitched good, steady ball and allowed beat several is some errors, which materially helped raising the visitors' score.

When the Phillies had einched their defeat, Young Murphy, late of the Auburn, N. Y. Club, got a trial in the box, and pitched fine ball. The New Yorks only found Murphy for a hit, but that happend to be a three-bagger by Doheny. He caught Joyce napping off second base and then rubbed it in on Davis by striking him out. Davis, Gleason, and Joyce played a magnificent fielding game, as the score shows. Tierman made a bad muff of a line hit off Abbatichlo's bat in the seventh inning, 'Hatty' ultimately scoring. Lajole had an off day at second and made two errors on very samy balls. The Phillies started off in a very businessilke manner and before the last Quaker had been id to reas our men had crossed the had been retired by Delehanty, Davis accord on Wilmot's out, Cross to Douglas, and Warner ended the inning to Douglas.

The Phillies were hanked in their half of the second, but the New Yorks found Donohue eas

Hartman singled and took second on a wild pitch. After Wayner and Dobeny had been retired Van Haltren singled and Hartman scored. The Phillies got two in their section of the seventh. Layole opened up hostilities with a two-bagger. Thompson and Cross were easy outs, and then came Abhaticchie's long drive to left, which our friend Tiernan could not hold. "Larry" scored on the muff. McFarland hit a little one toward third, which Warner and Dobeny fell over each other trying to get. Then youngater Mapphy plunked out a pretty single between second and first, and Abhaticchio scored. Joyce reached second in the New Yorks' half on Lajole's fumble and took second on a peased ball. He was caught napping by Murphy. Davis fanned the sir and Gleason was out, Lajole to Dougias. It was one, two, three for the Phillies in both the eighth and ninth. New Yorks got another in their half of the eighth. After Hartman had been retired, Murphy fumbled Wilmot's hit and the runner was safe. Warner was out to Abhaticchio, but Dobeny hit for three bases, and Wilmot crossed the plate. The score:

FORFEITED TO COLUMBIA.

Princeton 'Varsity Nine Refuses to Accept a Raling by Umpire Ming.

It was in the last half of the eighth inning of the Princeton-Columbia ball game at the Polo grounds yesterday that the Tigers refused to abide by a ruling by Umpire Joseph King, and left the field. The umpire then declared the game forfeited to Columbia by a score of 9 to 0, and about 1,000 spectators went away disap-pointed because what had been a most exciting ontest was not fought to a decisive finish.

Umpire King, who has had experience in umber of minor leagues, gave satisfaction in the Harvard-Columbia game on Friday; so there was no objection to him filed by Princeton yesterday when he appeared to officiate again. The college games are all played under the rules and regulations of the National League, so King proceeded to act strictly in accordance with the requirements. His umpiring was impartial, and nobody found any fault with him until the last half of the eighth inning, when the Princeton haif of the eighth inning, when the Princeton men were at the bat. Two runs had just been scored, which put the Tigers in the lead, when the umpire called a strike on one of the Princeton batsmen. Easton of the orange and black team, who stood near the plate, bat in hand, promptly said to the umpire:

"How much are you getting from Columbia!"
"Don't repeat that remark," said King, "for if you do I shall have to put you out of the game."

"Don't repeat that remark," said King, "for if you do I shall have to put you out of the game.

"You don't dare to do that," replied Easton, who followed this up with more comments. Then King ordered him out of the game and the Princeton players left the field. The Tigers and their friends argued that, as they were not playing professional ball, the umpire had no right to put one of their number off the field. The umpire said that he had been accused of dishonesty, and that he could not let the matter go unpunished. He stated that he had merely enforced the rules. C.F. Mathewson of the University A. C., who saw the game, said that the umpire's railing was correct, and that the incident was most unfortunate.

The Columbia undergraduates were ont in large numbers to cheer their 'varsity along, and they had a most exciting time of it. Columbia got a big lead in the first two innings by batting Harrison hard, but the latter settled down after that and was invincible. Fishel, whose arm wasn't in the best of condition, pitched well for Columbia under the circumstances except in the fourth inning, when the Tigers bunched five solid hits and rolled up four runs. The fielding by both teams was beautiful, Pell, Anderson, Pulsifer, Hutchings, Thompson, and Kafer making some stirring plays. Hill, Columbia's captain, distinguished himself by hammering out a three-bagger in the first inning, when the bases were filled, and by making two other safe drives later on. Kafer tied the score, after an uphill fight, in the seventh inning, by hitting to right for three bases and running home on a fly to the outfield.

In the cighth Columbia braced up, and with two out, and two men on bases Morris drove a double to centre. Cowperthweit scored, but Wallace, instead of keeping on to the plate, which

In the eighth Columns braced up, and with two out and two men on bases Morris drove a double to centre. Cowperthwait scored, but Wallace, instead of keeping on to the plate, which he could have easily reached, stopped at third, where he was left. A base on balls, a double, and a couple of passed balls let the Tigers have two runs in their half, after which the unpleasant occurrence told of above ended the game. The score:

the Ardsley Getters - Some Other See In the first half of the finals for the Golf Club Cup, played yesterday morning at Lakewood, Douglas started off with the lead by winning three holes. At the eighth Douglas was only 2 up, but here Richardson was badly bunkered and his rival won the hole. The home hole of 338 yards was won by Douglas in 3, a most remarkable feat. He played the second shot with a driving mashle and carried the bunker before the green, a shot that few players could have made with the brassy. For the next five holes each played par golf, Richardson needing only eighteen strokes for them, which enabled him to cut Douglas's lead down to 2. Then the latter began his fine work, and, after making the last four holes in 20, he finished the first part of the match with a lead of 6. The cards

NOTES OF LEGAL EVENTS.

The outbreak of hostilities with Spain will out bring into prominence a branch of the law which attracts very little attention because it is of very little importance in time of peacethat is, the law of admiralty relating to prize cares. This deals with the judicial procedure by which the ships captured from an enemy are condemned and sold for the benefit of the persons by whom the capture is made. Jurisdiction in prize cases in this country is exercised by the District Courts of the United States, and it Is the duty of the commanding officer of the vessel making the capture to send the prize, in charge of a compelent master and crew, into a convenient port, where the character of the captured craft may be determined. If she was taken flying the enemy's flag, the right to an adjudication against her will usually be clear. If her mag and papers be those of a neutral, she can nevertheless be condemned if the proof show that she is really the property of the enemy or if she were taken while attempting to break through a blockade. Where the national character of the prize is doubtful, but no one appears to claim her, it is the custom of the prize courts to wait a year and a day from the beginning of the proceedings before condemn-ing the vessel on account of the non-appearance of any claimant. In the war with Spain a majority of the prize cases will doubtless go to the United States District Court for the South-ern District of Florida, held at Key West.

In the large batch of decisions handed down by the Court of Appeals on Tuesday was an affirmance of the judgment of the Appellate Division of the Second Department in the matter of Henneberger (25 Appellate Division Reports page 164). In this case the Appellate Division, through Mr. Justice Woodward, held that an act of the Legislature general in its terms was so restricted in its operation as to be really a local act, and hence that it violated the constitutional probibition against passing a private or local bill relative to laying out, opening, or altering highways. The statute in question provided for proceedings to widen and improve a highway "in any town having a total population of 8,000 or more inhabitants and containing an incorporated village having a total population of not less than 8 000 and not more than 15,000 inhabitants, except in the county of Madison," and permitted such pro-ceedings to be instituted by "any five or more persons owning lands adjoining or abutting on any highway which extends within the limits of such town and without the limits of such incorporated village for a distance of at least 216 miles." Such a specification made the act really local legislation, but the Court of Appeals has sanctioned enactments almost as ob peats has sanctioned enactments almost as objectionable in the past, on the ground that they were general in form, and that the judiciary could not look beneath the surface in order to find a constitutional defect. The decision in the Henneberger case is therefore a new departure, for which much credit is due to the able opinion written by Judge Woodward in the Appellate Division.

On Monday the Supreme Court of the United States affirmed the decision of the Court of Appeals in the case of the people vs. Hawker (152 New York Reports, page 234). This case is one of much interest to the medical profession, and has provoked great difference of opinion among the Judges as it has travelled upward through the courts. The defendant was indicted under a section of the Public Health law of this State which makes it a misdemeanor for any person, after conviction of a felony, to practice or attempt to practice medicine. The indictment'alleged that the defendant was con victed of a felony in March, 1878, and had practiced medicine in the city of New York in 1896. The section of the Public Health law inder which it was found was originally enacted in 1893 and was amended in 1895. The defendant admitted his conviction in 1878 and that he had practiced here as a physician in 1896. He was therefore adjudged guilty in the Court of General Sessions. On a review by the Appellate Division, that court held that the Public Health law was unconstitutional, so far as it applied to convictions had before its enactment. The judgment of the trial court was therefore reversed. The opinion was written therefore reversed. The opinion was written by Judge Patterson, with whom Judges Van Brunt, Wilhiams, and Morgan J. O'Brien concurred. Mr. Justice Ingraham, however, wrote a dissenting opinion. In the Court of Appeals a contrary view was taken, and the law was pronounced constitutional in an opinion written by Judge Haight, Judges Martin and Denis O Brien dissenting. The Supreme Court of the United States has now finally also asserted the constitutionality of the legislation, but over the dissent of Justices Harlan, Peckham, and McKenna.

of the barkentine Herbert Fuller, for the mur der of Capt. Charles I. Nash of that vessel while on a voyage from Boston to South America in July, 1896, has resulted in a verdict which saves the life of the prisoner. On his although heavily handicapped. The St. Francis | first trial Bram was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. The judgment, however, was reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States on the ground that the trial court erroneously admitted proof of a statement made by the accused to a police officer, which was not a voluntary confession. Upon the second trial, which ended on Wednesday, the jury again found the prisoner guilty of murder, but added a direction that he should not suffer capital punishment. This was done in the exercise of the power conferred by an act of Congress approved Jan. 15, 1897, to reduce the cases under the jurisdiction of the Federal courts in which the penalty of death may be inflicted. This law provides that in all cases where the accused is found guilty of murder or rape under the Revised Statutes of the United States, the jury may qualify their verdict by adding thereto the words, "without capltal punishment," and whenever the jury does return a verdiet so qualified, the person thus convicted shall be sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for life. The only direct evidence against Bram was the testimony of a seaman named Brown, who was himself suspected of the murder in the first instance. He swore that he saw through a window of the deckhouse into the cabin, and witnessed the killing of the Captain by Bram. No blood stains were discovered on the clothing of any persons on board. and otherwise the evidence against Bram was purely circumstantial. The dismissal of the appeal to the Court of Appeals in the so-called Coal Trust cases was expected by many lawyers, in view of the present provisions of the Constitution prescribing the jurisdiction of that tribunal. "Except where the judgment is of death, appeals may be taken as of right to said court only from judgments or orders entered upon decisions of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, finally determining actions or special proceedings, and from orders granting new trials on exceptions where the appellants stipulate that upon affirmance judgment absolute shall be rendered against them." The order in the Coal Trust cases was simply an order for the examination of witnesses before trial for the purpose of preserving their testimony. It was vacated on the ground that the affidavits upon vacated on the ground that the affidavits upon which it had been obtained by the Attorney-General were insufficient. The proceeding was not causable of being carried to any conclusion for the eniorecement of a right or the recrees of a wrong. Even if the motion papers had been adequate, it would have terminated with the taking and illing of the testimony, it seems plain, therefore, that the order was not appealable to the Court of Appeals under the Constitution. Constitution. We have heard a great deal from time to time here in New York about the Massachusetts system of medical examiners being superior to our system of Coroners. Some doubt concerning its excellence, however, is suggested by an occurrence in the Massachusetts General Hospital which was reported from Boston on Mon-day. It appears that a well-known resident of this city who was a patient in that institution committed suicide there on the 13th inst. The return of his death made to the authorities declared that he died "from organic disease of brain, cirrhosis of liver, &c., laceration of brain and shock to nerves." The fact was that he and shock to nerves." The fact was that he shot himself in the head, but this circumstance was concealed until disclosed by the undertake. Suicide is either a crime the commission of which ought not to be hidden, or if committed under circumstances which negative criminality, is so important an occurrence that the concealment of cases of self-destruction is of very questionable propriety. We did not suppose that such cases could be concealed by the medical examiners under the Massachusetts statute.

CROKER OFF FOR ENGLAND. Expects To De Brack in August.-Becout Think the War Will Lest Long.

Richard Croker and his son Herbert sailed for England resterday morning on the Campania, They reached the pier at 7:30 in a carriage in which were also State Senator Thomas F. Grady and Andrew Freedman. A large number of Tammany men were waiting for them. Mr. Croker passed through the crowd and went at once to the rooms reserved for him, which he found filled with flowers. The decorations had been ordered by the Democratic Club. Senator Grady escorted Mr. Croker to the main saloon, where a short reception was held. This room also had been decorated with flowers. Civil Justice Stiner pinned a tiny American flag to the lapel of Mr. Croker's coat, and received in return a long-stemmed red rose from Mr. Croker. Only a few had succeeded in shaking hands with Mr. Croker when the "Alishabore" bell was sounded, and a stampede was made for the gangplank.

Mr. Croker's friends went down to the end of the pier and waited for the big steamship to move out of her dook. Every man had his handkerchief in his hand waiting for a sight of Mr. Croker, and when at last he came into view, standing at the rail on the upper deck well forward, the handkerchiefs were wildly waved, each brave seemingly striving to draw the attention of the leader to himself. The waving was answered by Mr. Croker, and an enthusiastic cheer broke out from the crowd on the end of the wharf.

Mr. Croker said while in the saloon: "This both a business and a pleasure trip, I expect to get back in August. No. I don't worry any about the war with Spain. I don't believe it will last very long.

Among those who saw him off were Perry Belmont, Police Commissioner Sexton, Nathan Straus, Deputy Chief of Police Devery. William Astor Chanler, T. E. Crimmins, Assistant District Attorney Meintyre, J. S. Cram, and Augustus W. Peters. main saloon, where a short reception was held.

WOULD ANNUL THE MARRIAGE. Referee's Report in the Case of Lillian Alles

Charles Donohue, as referee, has filed a report in the Supreme Court in favor of annulling the narriage of Lillian Allen to Guy H. Reynolds, son of John B. Reynolds, executor of the estate leather merchant. Lillian Allen, daughter of a former Police

Lillian Allen, daughter of a former Police Sergeant of this city, was at Saratoga with her mother when she me! Revnolde. Reynolds, who then had a wife and family at Rutland, Vt., the Reynolds home, spent considerable time away from his family. Lillian said that he represented that he was single. She was about 17 years old when, according to her statement, they were married one night, about May 22, 1888, in a parlor of a hotel at Saratoga.

She admitted that they did not live together immediately after the marriage, but she said that he joined her in this city in 1890 and they lived together for a considerable time thereafter and that she had four children, all of whom died. She said he assumed the name of Guy Stark at the time of the marriage. While the action for annulment was in progress in 1894 she married William Klopman, although Reynolds was still providing for her.

The elergyman before whom she alleged the marriage occurred, the Rey. Charles Sidney Dudley, was not produced, but Mrs. Amelia J. Cornell testified in detail as to the exermony of which she claimed to have been a witness. Reynolds devised having married the women. The which she claimed to have been a witness. Reynolds denied having married the woman. The proprietor and attendants of the hotel testified that as far as they knew the marrirge had not occurred.

The referee says that the evidence of Reynolds was mainly a denial of the assertions of the plaintiff, and that he seemed willing to swear

ounsel for Alleged Briber Protests Against Dropping Police Court Examination. Lawyer David M. Welsh made a protest in he Adams Street Police Court in Brooklyn yes terday against the dropping of the examination of the case of Charles M. Winant, the private secretary of Police Commissioner William E. Philips, who is charged with aiding and abetting in attempting to bribe some of the grand jurors who found indictments against Commissioner Philips and former City Works Commis-sioner Theodore B. Willis. Winant was indicted by the Grand Jury on Friday and was admitted to ball in $5,000. District Attorney Marean said that as Winant had been indicted the police court examination was not necessary, and he therefore moved for the dismissal of the case. Magistrate Brenner said he was of the opinion that the District Attorney was right in his conclusion, but Mr. Welsh objected to the dismissal of the com plaint. I wish to preserve the rights of my client, and do not take the view of the District Attorney that the examination is not necessary. My client demands the full protection of the law, and I am ready to give authority for my position."

"Who is the complainant?" asked Magistrate Brenner.

"Frederick G. Isies," replied District Attorney Marcan.

"The complaint is made by a man," said Mr. Weish. "who stands in the eye of the community and the law as one whose word would be taken for naught in any court of justice. I hold that we are entitled to an immediate hearing, and I demand it.

"I am under the impression," said Magistrate Brenner, "that I would have to hold the defendant for the action of the Grand Jury. The mere dismissal of the case by me would not dispose of it, and I question whether I have the right to go on in view of the action taken by the Grand Jury." Jury.
